Dear Sir,

I wish to apply for a position in the R.A.F.

I am eighteen years of age and have a slight knowledge of the internal combustion engine.

I am not particular what position I might get as long as it is in the Air Force.

I have had previous military training in the Army Service Corps.

Yours faithfully

burned under tropical conditions, where scientific trials have proved that mustard gas is more dangerous and persistent than in temperate conditions.

In the same Northern areas, personnel have worked for long periods in respirators, pouring the residue from thousands of bombs charged phosgene, after the initial release. During this type of operation, the men have at times literally paddled in liquid phosgene on the ground, the concentration given off being such that service respirators broke down and the personnel had to be temporarily relieved.

The same personnel have successfully completed the burning in forest country of N.S.W. approximately 20,000 bulk containers filled with mustard gas, the containers varying in capacity up to 80 gals. This operation, possibly the most difficult of the series because of the mountainous, timbered country, resulted in nearly all personnel engaged becoming casualties at some stage and in varying degrees, because such concentrations of mustard gas were encountered that no service protective equipment was adequate to counter them.

The completion of the disposal of C.W. stocks in N.S.W. involved the transport of certain heavier type stocks to the waterfront, loading onto lighters, towing these lighters to Rose Bay (Sydney Harbour) and transfer of the stocks to ship for ultimate sinking off the continental shelf.

6. The foregoing disposal details have been broadly stated, but a true idea of responsibilities of the personnel engaged in the work can only be fully appreciated by those officers who actually participated in the disposal operations and were in charge of the personnel.

7. The work was initially directed by S/Ldr. TREWIN and the major field work carried out by P/Lt. TROMPF in Queensland and N.S.W. Following TREWIN'S discharge in January, TROMPF took over the direction of operations, and continued the field work also, ably assisted in the latter by P/Lt. MYERS. Both these officers, but TROMPF in particular, merit the highest commendation. Also commended, but to a less extent, are S/Ldr. JEPPEERS and P/Lt. ARCHER for their work in the N.W. Area.

A.M.F. (Through A.M.E.M.) - These people did an excellent job under hazardous conditions. Suggest letters of commendation and notations on personal records.

18/6. (Sgd) W.H. ARMSTRONG, G/Capt., for A.M.E.M.

It is desired to record officially the outstanding services rendered by the R.A.A.F. during the recent war years, and since the war ended, by all Chemical Warfare personnel. Further, it is considered that some of the personnel concerned are deserving of special mention and a list is, therefore, appended for your consideration with a view to arranging for some appropriate recognition of their devotion to duty.

2. In general specially trained C.W. personnel within the R.A.A.F. were, due to their particular duties not afforded the opportunity for overseas service, but were retained on the mainland for:-

- (a) the intake of C.W. stocks from the United Kingdom.
- (b) the transportation of such stocks to the appropriate storage sites.
- (c) the maintenance of stocks at the storage sites until disposal action was taken after the war.

3. Set out in cold type, the paragraph above does not, perhaps indicate the magnitude of the work involved, but the officers in charge (from time to time) of the various storage depots know just how much effort was expended by the personnel under them in the execution of their arduous and at all times, dangerous duties.

The intake of C.W. stocks from the U.K. involved much hazardous work in the off-loading from ships of bombs and bulk containers, the destruction or de-canting of "leakers" and the decontamination of ships holds.

Later the C.W. personnel played an important part in the work of the R.A.A.F. Chemical Research unit at Bowen (Queensland) and at the Australian Field Experimental Station Proserpine (Queensland).

4. The most important reason, however, for the submission of this minute arises from the decision made to dispose of all stocks of live gases, namely, mustard and phosgene at the latter end of 1945.

5. From November, 1945, to April, 1946, inclusive, C.W. personnel have been engaged in the destruction of mustard gas stocks by burning in bulk and also by drowning at sea. Phosgene has been destroyed by release into the atmosphere in selected areas, and also by drowning at sea.

It is a fair statement that the disposal of these gas stocks rank with the more difficult and dangerous tasks undertaken by R.A.A.F. ground staff personnel.

In the Queensland and Darwin areas, large quantities of weapons and containers charged with the various grades of mustard gas were

D/Post.

Attached hereto are recommendations for the recognition of the services of certain members of the R.A.A.F. who undertook work of a difficult and exacting nature in connection with the disposal of stocks of mustard gas.

2. In view of the fact that awards appropriate to this form of service have now ceased, I consider it appropriate to make suitable extracts from the report by D/Arm. and record them on the personal files of the members concerned.

3. Would you please initiate necessary action?
